

STUDIO NO.12 CREATES LUXURY INTERIORS WITH A MASCULINE EDGE

Introducing the London duo who use opulent materials and muted colours to create rooms with calm sophistication

By AMY BRADFORD 02/02/2021

Chris Richards-White

Who are they? No.12 was founded in 2015 by Katie Earl and Emma Bradley, who met while working at leading design studio 1508 London. Both are experienced in luxury real-estate projects, but shared an ambition to create something different within that sphere: interiors that, they say, are 'considered, refined and responsive to the client, context and location'. Reflecting that desire for originality, they chose a gender-neutral name for their studio and set out to capitalise on their particular strengths: Emma is a trained furniture designer with a passion for rare vintage pieces, while Katie is an interior architect who's highly skilled at space planning.

DESIGN-ART

The Invisible Collection is an online platform where you can find the most beautiful handcrafted pieces by contemporary interior designers such as Pierre Yovanovitch. It also offers a virtual styling service to help you find the perfect items for your home.

theinvisiblecollection.com